

AFST-107: Social Media and Political Change in Africa

This is an interdisciplinary course examining the connections between the youth, education, revolutions in technology and transformations in politics and society at individual, national and global levels. The course aims at using social media as a heuristic device for gaining a better grasp of the drivers of change, the role of technology as well as the power of ideas, youth or organization in building a better world.

Credits: 3

Program: African Studies