

CCMS 717: Seminar in Media Psychology

Provides an overview of major research on media psychology and explores current debates about the psychological significance of media. Both traditional and new media genres are covered with respect to the ways that media shape cognitive processing, engagement, and behavior. Some attention will also be given to media and the shaping of social reality.

Credits: 3

Program: Communication Culture And Media Studies