

CHEM-284: Computational Methods

The course is an introduction to the properties and computational implementations of basic methods of scientific computing. The main thrust is intelligent use of mathematical software, although important theoretical results are explained.

Credits: 3

Program: Chemistry