

DENT-111: Evidence Based Decision Making I

This course introduces the student to the fundamental elements of epidemiology, study design and the ability to critically read the published dental literature. The student will gain an appreciation of scientific research methods and be able to read and critically assess the published dental literature. The course will introduce the student to the analysis of peer reviewed publications using the Literature Analysis Form (LAF).

Credits: 0.5

Program: Dentistry