

DENT-174: Physiology

This is a fundamental course in normal human physiology encompassing all relevant areas of the subject, from cellular function to organ systems, and focusing on the interrelationships among these systems. The topics covered closely parallel those outlined in Curriculum Guidelines in Physiology for dental students. The course is so constructed as to apply the scientific method where appropriate in order for students to comprehend basic physiological principles, concepts, and values.

Credits: 7

Program: Dentistry