

PHAR-219: Graduate Biomedical Informatics

This is the core introductory course for students beginning a master's degree in Biomedical Informatics or for students in other graduate degree programs seeking an introductory overview of the core theories, challenges, research methods and areas for the development of health information management systems and applications.

Credits: 2

Program: Pharmacology