

POLS-303: Independent Study: Comparative Politics

This course allows students to select a political science faculty member or a faculty member in another academic unit at Howard University to work with on an agreed upon creative or scholar independent research project that furthers the student's interest in the area of comparative politics. The purpose of independent study research is also to support the thesis development and/or the student's future creative career goals..Open to students who have completed POLS-204 and two other Comparative Politics courses. Permission of instructor, Director of Graduate Studies, and Chair is required

Credits: 3

Program: Political Science