

FDSM-213: Spiritual Formation and Min. Leadership

This course invites Master of Divinity students into an intentional process of spiritual discipline and introspection, personal faith development, and vocational discernment. Students explore the rich tradition of spiritual exercises, including prayer, Bible study, and meditation, in order to develop a program which best suits his or her individual needs, calling, and personality. Students will explore various ministry models, share their generational and vocational perspectives, and critically engage in dialogue about re-inventing and reforming models of ministry and leadership.. Weekly sessions will be comprised of lectures, guest presentations, discussion, audiovisual presentations, and workgroup presentations.

Credits: 3

Program: Theological Studies