

LAW-560: Adoption Law

The course examines the legal framework governing adoptions through an examination of the legal relationships among children, families, and the state. Coursework includes substantive and practical analysis of the status, rights, and obligations of parents and children and current issues impacting the balance between family autonomy and state regulation. Students also will examine how adoption law involves complex issues of race, class, gender, and economic status.

Credits: 3

Program: Law