

LAW-807: International Moot Court Team

This course prepares various international moot court teams competing on behalf of Howard University School of Law around the world. The course includes lectures on developing trends in contemporary international human rights law. The course also focuses on developing the oral, writing, and research skills needed to compete in some of the world's toughest international moot court competitions. Howard University School of Law's International Moot Court Team competes in some of the world's largest and most prestigious competitions during the spring semester. Competitions include The Philip C. Jessup Moot Court Competition, which is the largest moot court competition dedicated to public international law in the world as well as the U.S. Nepal International Moot Court Competition hosted by the U.S. Embassy in Kathmandu.

Credits: 4-2

Program: Law